Axis Troops Retreat Toward Messina as Allies Take Catania

Vital Road Junction Seized

The fall of Catania was followed quickly by the seizure of Paterno, which is an important road junction about 12 miles to the northwest in a web formed by mountainous roads and a railroad looping around the west side of Mount Etna. The Allied gnat cut one of the main roads by which the Germans and Italians could escape from the Catania trap and put British forces now on the edge of the only railroad on the western slopes of Mount Etna. Allied warships and bombers hampered the other escape road on the east side of the peak.

The fall of Paterno and Catania appeared to doom the town of Misterbianco, mid-way between the two bigger towns and on the main escape road out of Catania. (Misterbianco means Mr. White.)

The Canadians hurried toward Paterno, which guards only one of the escape routes, by which the enemy could escape west of Mount Etna and the American pushing force from the west. The enemy had been fighting in the most difficult terrain. The enemy had been fighting in the most difficult terrain. The enemy had been fighting in the most difficult terrain.

Transportation Is Not Problem Grain Movement

Any problem that may arise in the movement of the 1943 grain crop to lake will be one of storage rather than transportation, according to the Canadian Grain Commission.

The Canadian Grain Commission, which is responsible for the movement of grain from the farm to the port, is confident that the transportation of grain will not be a problem.

The Bulletin's SPORTS SHOW by Hal Dean

WITH six of the 10 events completed and three of the remaining four well advanced, the 16th annual tournament of the Alberta Lawn Bowling Association is almost ready to be written off as another triumph for the officials at the helm of that organization.

The year's tournament was supposed to have been held in Calgary, but extensive damage to the greens in that city through winter storms, necessitated the switching of the provinces' premier bowling event to Edmonton on rather short notice.

That the game still retains its popularity is evident from the fact that in spite of present day conditions, the entry list for the Hudson's Bay Trophy and the other competitions showed a decline of only six last year with 40 quatermen, seven of them visitors, competing. The doubles and singles have also been well attended.

Cards and Yanks Running Away in Major Leagues

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—AP—Most of the major league baseball clubs played Wednesday and will be due today to catch their trains for the next developments indicate that they will catch only a minor.

It now appears, will exclude them to catch the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees.

What were still fairly tight races at the time of the All-Star game have developed into one-way races in both leagues. The Cards and Yanks, making the most of their home stands, now are enjoying July lead.

Today the Cards are 11½ games in front of Pittsburgh, which is second. The Dodgers, who are 1½ games ahead of the second-place Washington Senators.

The Dodgers open their home stand Friday, Wednesday, and Thursday, with a place in the first division, but alone without any other team.

There are in three place, 13 games off the pace and only one game ahead of the Cincinnati Reds. They need trip followed by the loss of four straight games to the Cardinals.

Meanwhile the Cards sailed along at a merry clip, winning four of five games. The Yankees' home stand was just about as successful. Monday's mauling of the Pirates, 11 to 0, capped a string of four wins.

One game game is scheduled in the National league today. All American league clubs are idle.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Who says professional golf is a little doped but that the success of the tournament has been largely due to efforts of the same Bill McGrouther.

Although local bowlers claim a large interest in the prize, visitors are certain of a substantial share of the trophy. Spotlighting The Sport Girl

By SUSIE Q

When the girls of a town near Montreal asked to participate in the annual sports day, they were refused because of lack of dressing room. The girls provided a tent and the sports committee gave way and at the end of the day gave the girls a vote of thanks for their efforts. A Montreal comment is to the effect that girl athletes have passed the barbaric methods of yore.

Rumor in the professional girls' softball league around Chicago, in which several Alberta girls are playing is that the entire league will move their activities to the warmer climate of Florida and back for the winter. What a life!

A New York paper prints a long story about Gertrude Ederle who swam the English channel in 1926 as being one of the many girl athletes who have entered war service. She is now employed at LaGuardia Field in that city checking airplane instruments. Her hearing was affected by the swim but her eyes seem particularly good.

The expected match between Patty Berg and Babe Dickson at Vancouver next Sunday for the Red Cross seems to have been cancelled. The U.S.A. having stepped in. It would seem that amateurs and professionals in the States are still forbidden to meet even when the receipts go to war charities. In Canada, this phase of content has been allowed for several years.

Miss Berg has donated a military uniform since.

With Edmonton girl athletes traveling 750 miles to the Western Canada track meet at Vancouver next Sunday, Toronto is trying to arrange a party for the 220 mile trip to Cleveland, where the U.S. women's championships will be held on August 17th. And it is said that the Olympic Games of 1936 are being suggested in various newspaper columns. Well, life is a cycle and requires a great deal of optimism. So why not mention British Empire Games of 1940?

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—AP—Captain Craig Wood and Walter Hagen yesterday announced pairing for the Ryder cup matches this weekend at the Plum Hollow course.

The pairings: Byron Nelson and Harold M. Soren (couple) vs. Melvin Hart and O'Neal White; Jimmy Demaret and Lloyd Mangrum (couple) vs. Willie Genge and Sammy Rapp.

Wood and Sergei Vite Gorgez (couple) vs. Jimmy Thomson and Bobby Cruikshank; George Sorenson and Frank Walsh (couple) vs. Harry Cooper and Hagen.

Hagen, captain of the challengers, will be making his first appearance as a player in the series, having served as non-playing captain of both the cup team and the challenging squad.

Wood's cup team last year whipped Hagen's challenge would be 5 to 3, but Hagen gets his chance to square accounts in the war series in 18-hole four-ball match Saturday and 36-hole hand-to-hand singles Sunday.

GIRLS

Bill Big, a Co-Ed dream of the past college man, had the unfortunate experience of following little Leslie MacMillan around the city oval during their four years at N.Y.U. Now he suddenly has developed into the speediest miler in American history—only to play second to Gumbey Hulse in visiting Bremen from Sweden.

Hulse, a 25-year-old husky who stands six feet, one inch, was more outstanding in the shorter distances during his collegiate career, while MacMillan, the kid who learned his running on the sidewalks of New York, was dominating the miles.

Just before they graduated last year, little Mac won the N.Y.U. mile in 4:12, with Hulse third behind him in 4:20. Now, Hulse is 4:08, while Mac is 4:12.

Then came Hagen's invasion and Hulse joined Dodds as a challenger in a cross-country series. Apparently Hulse would have to settle now for third honors. But he started the series last Saturday by beating Dodds and finishing second in 4:08. Hulse was clocked in 4:06—fastest time ever turned in by an American outdoors and bettering the old world records held by Jack Lovell, Cunningham and Syd Woodson.

Only Hagen, with his 4:04, and Anne Anderson, another Swedish runner, who would mark is pending, ever covered the distance faster on continental ground. Hulse ran 4:04 on an indoor board track.

COACH NOT SURPRISED

EMIL VON ELLING, the veteran N.Y.U. track coach, said the only person who had surprised him by the blood youngster's sudden success in the miles of the New York City. "No, I wasn't surprised," said Von Elling, one of the shrewdest tutors in the sported school business. "You see, Bill always was a clean runner and he always kept in good shape. Now he is reaching his physical peak. You might say he is coming of age as far as competition is concerned."

The hustling Hulse is drafted because of his job as a chemical engineer with a Staphole, N.J., rather recent, so it appears he will be around for the indoor season. Hagen will be gone then, without a doubt. It leaves that 4:04 indoor mark. Maybe then big Bill Hulse will be promoted to first fiddle.

Hot, Dry Weather Extends Area Boundaries

In North-Central Alberta Crops Are Reported Good; Peace River Requires Rain

Boundaries of the southern drought area are extending north to include parts of Central Alberta, Hon. D. B. MacMillan, minister of agriculture, stated Thursday. Continued hot, dry weather has forced the drought boundaries north, Mr. MacMillan says.

On Inspection

George Stephen, Montreal, vice-president in charge of traffic, Canadian Pacific Railway, who arrived in Edmonton Thursday morning in the course of an inspection tour.

Although moisture reserves in Central Alberta present a real deterioration of crops in that area, some heat damage is being done to crops on stubble. The Peace River block is also experiencing a dry spell, and rain is needed for crops to fill out normally.

In the Edmonton area, moisture and crop conditions are reported good. Wheat is from 80 to 100 per cent headed, and coarse grains are 40 to 80 per cent headed. Cereals are good, and flax is reported from good to fair.

Slight general damage from lodging is noted in the vicinity of Edmonton, and slight hail damage is reported from many points. Hay and pasture is heavy, but having and summerfallow operations have been held back by rain. Livestock on pasture is in satisfactory condition in this area. The honey crop outstanding in the area is good.

While field crops on summerfallow in southern Alberta may prove to be a disappointment, the stubble area in many cases not winter cutting. Early sown crops are ripening, and the harvest will commence in a week or two.

RAIN NEEDED

Rain is needed immediately in the Calgary, Red Deer, and Corralton areas, if normal yields are to be expected.

Field crop conditions in north-central Alberta are good, but hot weather in the Peace River district has lowered prospects of the crops. Conditions of crops there are now fair to good, and fair to poor in others.

Hay crops in central and northern Alberta are heavy, but the Peace River district has been almost completely in the dry area of the Peace country. In the severe drought area, a severely wintered feed is expected.

Cattle prices have taken a slight dip at most markets in the past week. Mr. MacMillan, minister of agriculture, stated Thursday that the cattle market remained steady at the same level as in previous weeks.

Following announcement of a new price ceiling on dressed lamb, effective September 1, the price of lamb was sharply lowered. The new price ceiling will reduce prices from 36 cents a pound to 22 cents.

At Edmonton, choice steers reached a new high price of $13.00, about $1.00 above the general level. Mr. Duncan, food surveyor, Dr. Somerville, health inspector, and Mr. Martin, financial aspects of health services.

Mr. Bullock, of the Old Age Pension office, was appointed secretary of the sub-committee.

HOG MARKET

On the Edmonton hog market no change in prices has been noted since August 10, with prices ranging from $15.00 to $15.50. The Calgary market was steady with the basic price at $15.00.

Leagues Sponsor

10-Day Carnival

The carnival which is being held at the corner of Kingsway and 101 street for 10 days starting Wednesday, is being sponsored by the Edmonton Federation of Community Leagues to raise funds for the construction and covered rink facilities.

The carnival, located at Edmonton by the Midway Amusement Company, will feature rides and games. A race night official of the federation will make a draw for a $25 cash prize.

New Bulletin Serial Story . . .

By RENE RYERSON MART

CHAPTER I

BARBIE FRONCE turned the key and that before the full length mirror in her bedroom. The blue of the new gingham dress brought out the dark haziness of her sparkling blue eyes and shining hair. She followed it with the slim youthful lines of her figure. There was smart, expensive simplicity in the one-button closing of the blue blouse, the blue skirt and the pouch pockets on the skirt.

She nodded her head in satisfaction. She was glad she had bought the dress although she didn't really need it. Her closet was crowded with suits and dresses already. There were tiers of hat boxes on the shelves, and a suitcase and less row of pumps and sandals on the shoe shelf beneath. Shoes were already ranged and there was talk that clothes were soon to be. It was only sensible to buy pretty clothes while one could.

A mellow voice floating up the curving stairs interrupted her. "Barbie, dinner's ready. Miss Barbara, dinner's ready. Your father's waiting."

Barbie started guiltily. She had started the dress on her own. Right, Molly, she answered the servant's summons. "It'll be right down." And then, impulsively, "Wait a minute."

She ran lightly down the stairs and poked on the woman who was a critical inspection. The aged colored woman who was a baby, and after her mother's death she had given Barbie and a cousin, Ned, all the physical care and household that a mother could give. Ned, all the physical care and household that a mother could give. Ned, all the physical care and household that a mother could give.

Her face wrinkled in an indulgent smile. "Blue looks so becoming on you, Miss Barbie."

Barbie laughed. "Thank you, Molly." She turned to her dressing room. "Any one here for dinner tonight?"

"Your father and mother are at French Chateau," Molly informed her.

Charles Murray was a student at the nearby university who had been hired to tutor Ned French through difficult math courses. He had become close friends. Charles didn't live in the French home but he was there as often as he thought of him as a guest.

Barbie found him Ned looking behind their chairs waiting for her arrival, and her father already seated at the table. She stopped behind her father's chair and dropped a kiss on his gray hair. "You've given me mother's family without even looking around. Good evening to you, Ned. You're looking very lovely."

It was merely a close shave but Barbie knew. Ned never really noticed anything she wore. "Mashed potatoes," Ned said. "Thank you, Ned. Nice of you to notice my new dress."

Her father poured at her then through his glasses. "O'Brien's a fine one."

Ned took up the toast. "Oh, Ned, pretend. Dad, you wouldn't know if Barbie came to dinner without a dress."

His words set off a peal of laughter. "Barbie, Ned—Charles Murray's and she's waiting for him. Her mother's family without even looking around. Good evening to you, Ned. You're looking very lovely."

By the time he was drafted a week into the army, Ned had a long white envelope from his pocket and handed it to his father. "Barbie laid down her fork and sat staring at Ned. It was quite like the envelope that a moment before had been filled with the small sounds of well-mannered dining."

Archibald French drew the single sheet of paper and read it slowly. He cleared his throat. "Your draft papers, eh? Why didn't you tell me before, Ned? This doesn't give us much time. We'll have to see about getting you a commission."

Ned stopped his father with a raised voice. "No, Dad. That won't be necessary."

"You mean you've already been offered one?"

The boy shook his head. "No, I'm going as a private."

CHAPTER II

WITH a sense of uneasiness Barbie looked in the conversation between her father and Ned.

"Ned, this is no time to go off. Of course, you're not going into the army. You're going to be a valuable man." Archibald French spoke with official conviction. The one of all his friends were officers.

Barbie shook her head again. "No, Ned. I'm not going. I'm going as a private. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier."

"You're not going to be a soldier. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man."

Barbie shook her head again. "No, Ned. I'm not going. I'm going as a private. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier."

"You're not going to be a soldier. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man."

Barbie shook her head again. "No, Ned. I'm not going. I'm going as a private. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier."

"You're not going to be a soldier. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man."

Barbie shook her head again. "No, Ned. I'm not going. I'm going as a private. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier."

"You're not going to be a soldier. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man. You're going to be a valuable man."

Barbie shook her head again. "No, Ned. I'm not going. I'm going as a private. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier. I don't want to be a soldier."

The thought seemed as a spring to Ned. He took a long look off the blue dress, replaced it in his hands, smoothed the projecting buttons over it and fastened the lid. She took the dress back to the closet and the key that it cost would buy a war bond.

The simple act of emancipation seemed a relief. But she was still too restless to read or listen to the radio, write letters, the activities that usually filled her evenings at home. She had to keep moving or she'd go mad, and she did not want to do that.

She and Ned were unusually close for brother and sister. Perhaps the fact that their mother had died when they were very small had had something to do with drawing them closely together.

And that brought her right to her father. She was going to miss Ned when he was drafted. She couldn't imagine the house without him. Ned was waiting for the postman. She'd have to do something. She'd have to do something. She'd have to do something.

His spirit seemed to then stand with a new depression. What could she do? She had no practical training along any line whatsoever. An expensive girl's finishing school had given her a taste of the world. She had been a girl who had the nine personal qualities of a girl. Ned was a young, healthy, strong. And then she remembered the conversation at dinner. Charles had been talking about a chemistry course to train women for war jobs. There was the solution to her problem.

She saw Charles about it the next morning. She'd gone over to the chemistry building early and had found him in the chemistry department and a government man from Washington. His face lit up when he came out into the hall and saw her. He was also surprised.

"I haven't much time, Ned. We're organizing the course. It'll be in the fall. What was it you wanted to see me about?"

She told him briefly. He didn't react as she had expected him to. His voice was troubled. "I don't know, Ned. I hardly think this is the thing for you."

He explained it patiently as she would to a child. "The women we train here will go into laboratories in war plants. The jobs they accept will be hard duty, sometimes even dangerous. That isn't for a girl like you."

Charles didn't know her very well. Barbie decided. A hard job was just what a dangerous job was just what she wanted. Ned had made his choice by going in the army as a private. Well, she wanted to show him that she had the same determination to do a hard job. One later she heard Ken Carter refer to this quality as "guts" and was to wonder what Charles would have thought if she had said the expression that day.

But she didn't know Ken Carter. But she didn't know Ken Carter. But she didn't know Ken Carter. But she didn't know Ken Carter. But she didn't know Ken Carter.

"I'm being drafted a week from Saturday," Ned said to his father. It was then that the war phantom left the news headlines and the radio flashes and became one of the little group that was the French family.

none of them steadily. In fact he took Barbie to dances and parties more often than any other girl. And that brought her right to her father. She was going to miss Ned when he was drafted. Checks Crops For Reduction Board

E. L. Gray, director of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act for the wheat acreage reduction board, was here Wednesday checking up on the crop situation in this province. He stated that the sole of the expected low yield from crops in the south eastern part of the province, general crop production will be close to standard for this province.

A great many townships in the south eastern parts of the prairie provinces are suffering badly from drought and crop deterioration is spreading, but in other sections the outlook will be in the east and the crop production.

Mr. Gray left for Saskatoon Wednesday night.

CHAPTER XXVI
LINCOLN'S thoughts raced. No, no—he could not kill Raul. Raul, his half-brother, of whom he had always been so fond, to whom he had looked up during childhood days. Raul who had killed—sure enough—but, he had been misled, by his stepfather's harsh, puritanical threat to help.

Years had passed. And something had happened to Raul. Something that had warped his soul. This something, in its ultimate effect, was of dreadful danger to the cause of the United Nations—and so.

No, no. No. He could not kill. There must be another way, and all at once, he found it.

"Listen, Raul!" he said. "I shall tell the devishes precisely who you are. I shall tell them that you're not a Muslim, a descendant of the Prophet Mohammed, inspired by Allah, but, contemptuously, a renegade Christian who hates his own people for decidedly unconvincing and selfish reasons. And what will happen then? Let me tell you. Your whole house of cards will collapse."

"I don't mind, where I'm concerned. At least, not killed to keep me from."

"The devishes," interrupted Raul, "may not believe you."

"Won't they, though?"

"Go ahead! Talk to them! I dare you!"

Like the old Raul on school-boy days—thought Lincoln—with "I dare you!"

Aloud he said:

"I'm not bluffing. But you are. I'll give you a choice. Either come now—and I've no idea how you'll do it, maybe by putting it on some sort of spiritual passive resistance basis, you'll give up this conspiracy and persuade the devishes to go home."

HOLD EVERYTHING

"I understand you do a little bartering in your spare time!"

LAFF-A-DAY

CURIOUS WORLD

"You no idea. But maybe he'll enter a Jewish monastery. Would be the very thing. You know, it's a Muslim at heart—a Muslim!"

"I'm shocked in the Afghan," said Lincoln in a pleasant tone which again was in Yiddish. A girl whose complexion glowed the pinkish of the midday sun! I would ask her to be my wife—never I had in the wars, joining the Sixteenth Pathan Batta."

Nancy Brown, her hands on the steering wheel, looked over her shoulder at Lincoln.

"You aren't going to war, are you?" she demanded.

"Well, isn't she interrupted—there's really no reason why you shouldn't ask me to be your wife, is there?"

"I've asked you."

"You have not."

"Oh! Will you?"

"I'll ask you over," she replied—and she stepped on the gas.

In handling the basic toxins responsible for rheumatism and eliminative measures are not of much value. The body must be cleaned out and to accomplish this purifying process, all proteins and starches must be prohibited at the start. The best plan to follow in order to bring about vigorous elimination is the fast on fruit or fruit juices.

I find that the fruit juice regimen produces the quickest results possible and tomato juice, canned or fresh, is suitable to take one fruit every two hours. He is to drink plenty of water. In between the fruit juice feedings in order to bring about a more rapid flushing through the kidneys.

At least one sponge or shower bath must be used, and in addition it is advisable to take one plain warm water enema a day, and preferably two. This fasting schedule must be continued for five days. As a general rule, muscular soreness will disappear the first day or two of the fast. However, in spite of rapid improvement, the patient should continue until the five-day period is up.

Some patients will improve if the fast is omitted and the start is made by beginning in a carefully supervised manner. I find the best results are obtained when the fast is tried first.

When the patient has completed the five days on the juice and is ready to begin eating, I find it advisable to allow him a moderate amount of meat. Many patients have the idea that it is a good plan to stay away from meat entirely but after my experience with hundreds of cases, I do not believe this drastic change is necessary. The amount of meat is best kept to one-quarter of a pound a day, although this may be increased to one-half pound in some cases. No more than this should be allowed. The one-quarter pound refers to lean meat, that is, without any bone, fat or gristle, and this amount will be found sufficient to provide all the meat protein the body requires. Any of the following may be substituted for the beef: Fish, chicken, turkey, or rabbit.

For the first few weeks, the patient must be very careful not to indulge in too many starches. Their absence will not be missed as much as would starches be in the case. If the patient learns to eat plenty of the non-starchy vegetables, both of the control and reform. The internal elimination should be watched very carefully and if the bowels do not move of themselves, then the enema should be taken. A clean colon is an immense help during this period when the patient is trying to get well, as intestinal toxins seriously have the power to stir up the rheumatic toxins. Whenever possible the colon should be cleaned without resorting to regulation by laxatives.

Warmth is also of value in keeping the patient free from discomfort and he should avoid exposing the body to cold or damp.

Those capable of disciplining themselves sufficiently enough to follow the advice given will get a good start toward the elimination of the basic rheumatic toxins or poisons and by continuing to observe sane habits of living should be able to return to good health.

All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Large pamphlet, self-administered, envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 50 words. Address: McCoys Health Service, The McCoy Building, 1151 West 6th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.
